Amicably Settled. Some trouble was occasioned in town Tuesday evening by a misunderstanding between Mr. J. J. McFarland and Mr. F Hansmann. Mr. McFarland had been drinking quite freely during the day in Mr. Hansmann's saloon, and was quite intoxica ted. In the evening he became in a manper sober, and found that his money was gone. He at once said either Mr. Hansman or his son had taken it. Of course Mr. H. became indignant at this accusation and things begun to get pretty lively, when Mr. M. was arrested. Next morning Mr. M. L. Finnell, a brother-in-law of McFarland, settled the trouble between Mr. Hansmann and Mr. McFarland by stating that
